PLANS GOING FORWARD

Encouragement Given Project For Modern Hotel Here.

The plans for the proposed new hotel in this city are going forward, and Ray R. Keach, who represents local people who purchased a lot at the corner of Second and Ewing street, is receiving much encouragement. Mr. Keach is confident that no difficulty will be raised in securing money with which to erect and equip the building. Some inquiries from out of town investors have been made, it is stated. The lot which was owned by an Indianapolis man was sold to the Seymour investors through the H. C. Dannettell realty

Hitchcock, Administration Spokesman, Sees Victory by The Modified Plan.

By United Press Washington, August 14-Demo-

have agreed to the mild reservation program, this program "will go through all right," a leading democratic senator has told Senators Lodge and McNary, according to this information.

Lodge is said to have accepted tentatively the program of the "mild" group, on condition that two changes be made in phraseology. The "mild" reservationists, led by McNary and Kellogg, are bending every effort to get twenty adherents to their plan and hope to have them by the end of the week, they said today.

McNary submitted the proposed reservations to Lodge at a conference lasting an hour. Lodge is understood to have said the reservations looked all right to him but suggested a change in the one covering withdrawal from the league and another in the one on article ten.

KEEN RIVALRY IN DRIVE FOR $200,000 BY FARMERS

Silver Cup Offered to First County to Report That Its Quota is Raised.

By United Press

Indianapolis, August 13—Rivalry for the prizes to be given the counties going "over the top" first in the $200,. 000 guarantee fund campaign of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations is growing keen, according to state headquarters in the Public Savings building here. William Bosson, treasurer for the fund, announced today that reports indicate a close race for the silver cup to be awarded the county organization reaching its quota first.

Jackson county should make a good race. Geo. F. Stahl, of Seymour, is chairman for the county, and J. B. Cross, of Brownstown, is secretary. The quota assigned to Jackson county is $2,500, and all the money is to come from the farmers and their friends. The county going "over the top" first is to receive a silver cup and the first choice of seats for the State convention in November. The winner of second place will receive a banner and second choice of seats. Prizes are also offered for the township organizations.

"This campaign is one for the farmer's own good," declared Mr. Bosson. "It is a campaign by, for and of the farmers, but at the same time it is helping the farmer, it will help the general public in the fight against the high cost of living. Our first work is to wipe out unfair speculation in foodstuffs. We want to stop gambling in food prices by men who have nothing to do with production. Our program, beyond that, calls for an attack on freight rate discrimination, a combined effort to end domination by the packers and grain men, development of the science of farm management, and protection against unfair and unwise legislation. These are the reasons we ask township, to J. L. Peters, lots 14 and Gordon. Biographies and critiques Indiana farmers to raise a $200,000 fund."

AMERICANS

Germans Sent Smoothest Secret Service Men to Camp on Trail of Americans as Soon as They Landed.

Paris.-American newspaper correspondents abroad are now permitted to relate some of the troubles the Americans experienced with the great German spy system.

No army in the world war had a harder fight against the smooth-working, far-reaching Teuton espionage system than did General Pershing's warriors. The Germans concentrated a large number of spies against the Americans immediately after the first Yankee contingents landed in France and kept augmenting their numbers. The American army was made the object of the spy offensive because the Germans recognized that, if the war continued until the summer of 1918 and then lapped over into 1919 it was the American army that would figure largely in allied operations. They wanted to find out what kind of an army Pershing had, what the morale of the individual soldiers was, what the Miss Rosie Becker and Clarence staffs were planning and what disposi-Waskom, of Rockford, Ills., were tion was being made of American troops behind the western battle front.

Hard to Keep Secrets.

In spite of all precautions and in spite of contre-espionage forces, German agents undoubtedly collected a large amount of valuable information behind the American lines to supplement other odds and ends they had picked up from American prisoners, from the reports of their land and air observers and from other sources.

Officers tried hard to keep the Boche from learning that one American unit had been removed from the line and supplemented by another. That was information that the German intelligence officers wanted for their "order of battle" maps, by which they kept track of the exact disposition of all enemy troops in the line and reserve.

One night elements of the Seventyseventh division, from New York city, slipped quietly into line in the Baccarat sector, relieving other units of the Forty-second division, which entrained for the west to help repel Hindenburg's last great offensive. There was every man's land" at daybreak they saw hoisted from the German trenches this sign, printed in English:

"Good-by, Forty-second division! Welcome, Seventy-seventh!"

There were other instances of the same kind; but the thing was not all one-sided. Often the Americans knew that Heinie was slipping in a new outfit, the number of the outfit and just what kind of stuff its men were made of, and they made important use of that information.

Much Trouble in Alsace.

American troops that saw service in the mountainous Alsace country had the greatest difficulties with the spy evil. Behind the Franco-American lines were a large number of people who were German-born and who retained their sympathies for the kaiser. The country offered unusually good opportunities for spies because of its hilly, wooded nature. On several nights, when American troops were entering the trenches to relieve other units, rockets and colored lights shot up from hills behind the American front. The German artillery promptly responded to this tip by pounding the American communication trenches, knowing that they would be crowded with men passing forward. The hills and woods afforded such excellent hiding places that it was next to impossible to attempt to trap the men who had touched oif the lights. The situation in Alsace was all the more difficult because the French government desired to avoid offending the Alsatian villagers by making arrests.

PRICE OF SUGAR FIXED AT ELEVEN CENTS A POUND

'Fair" Retail Figure Adjudged By Department of Justice-Announcement by Ames.

By United Press.

Washington, August 14.—Eleven cents a pound has been adjudged a "fair" retail price for sugar by the department of justice. Assistant Attorney General C. A. Ames announced today.

"Dealers charging more will be investigated," said Ames. "Ten cents a pound is a fair wholesale price. The additional penny should be enough profit for the retail deal-

Ames asked consumers who are charged more to write, either to him at the Department of Justice, Washington, or to the nearest United States district attorney.

Placed in charge of anti-trust prosecutions and the campaign to catch profiteers and price gougers by Attorney General Palmer, Ames is going after the sugar profiteers.

Some retail sugar dealers have been charging 15 cents a pound, the department has heard.

Ames already has obtained convictions of two, one at Pittsburg, and one yesterday at Binghamton, N. Y. In this case the dealer was

All sugar now being sold in the United States is controlled by the government through the United States sugar equalization board, with headquarters at New York. This board buys all raw sugar produced and imported. It then sells the raw sugar to the refining companies. The board stipulates the price at which the refining concerns shall sell the sugar to wholesalers. Wholesalers are under license but their selling price is not fixed by the Several congressmen today were planning to demand that the sugar equalization board also fix the wholesale price, which could be easily done, they say, because the board could withdraw the license of any wholesaler who refused to sell according to directions.

Trades Farm for Store.

R. L. Moseley has returned from Rockford, O., where he has taken over a general store. He traded his farm near Marion church, Jennings county, and two pieces of Indianapolis property for the stock which consists of shoes, clothing, dry goods and groceries. The store was established seven years ago and is doing a good business. The stock will be invoiced Monday and the store was closed until the stock could be listed. The store was owned by George A. Nuttle, who will probably move on the farm near here. Mr. Moseley has secured John Clark, of Rockford, to manage the business

Many of those who were quartered in French homes acquired a liking for French breakfast coffee, cafe au lait. With American housewives the wishes of a returning soldier, so far as they concern things to eat and drink, are law; but to many cafe au lait means coffee with milk in it, and nothing more. As a matter of fact. breakfast coffee such as the French serve, calls for a great deal more than pouring a little milk into the usual morning brew.

Cafe au lait is not made in France by the boiling method, but the ground product is put into a filter and boiling water poured slowly through it. In this way its full flavor is obtained without any bitter taste. One tablespoon of coffee is allowed for each cup. Cafe au lait is served in a very large cup holding almost a pint, and a goodly amount of boiled milk is put into the cup before the coffee is added. In some restaurants an equal quantity of boiled milk and coffee are mixed together.

In attempting to imitate the French methods of making coffee, bear in mind that their way of roasting differs from our own. We roast our coffee berries just enough to make them a light brown color, while in France, they are cooked to a much darker hue. According to the French coffee is roasted at home in a simple iron pan. The secret of successful roasting depends upon keeping the berries constantly in motion with a wooden knife or spoon for a single burnt berry will impair the aroma of the entire mixture.

A French coffeepot is a simple affair. It is in two parts; the lower section receiving the liquid after it has filtered through the grounds on the top. The strainer is fitted tight, thus preventing the escape of grounds and retaining the flavor and strength of the coffee. This type of pot is usually made of tin. There is another kind of coffeepot made in France of earthenware. It is widely used in America and can be procured at almost any household goods store. The strainer of this pot is not fitted tight, but is heavy enough to keep its place by its own weight. Its advantage over the tin pot is that if the coffee is to be kept for a short time. it does not impart a peculiar taste to the beverage which the tin may

The French maintain that coffee should be ground just as needed; if ground too long in advance it dries out and loses both strength and flavor. # THE "BLUES" Caused by Millions of people who worry, are despondent, have spells of mental depression, feel blue and are often melancholy, believe that these conditions are due to outside influences over which they have little or no control. Nearly always, however, they can be traced to an internal source—acid-stomach. Nor is it to be wondered at. Acid-stomach, beginning with such well defined symptoms as indicated gestion, belching, heartburn, bloat, etc., will, if not checked, in time affect to some degree or other all the vital organs. The nervous system becomes deranged. Digestion suffers. The blood is impoverished. Health and strength are undermined. The victim of acid-tomach, although health and strength are undermined. stomach, although he may not know the cause of his ailments, feels his hope, courage, cause of his aliments, feels his hope, courage, ambition and energy slipping. And truly life is dark—not worth much to the man or woman who has acid-stomach!

Get rid of it! Don't let acid-stomach hold you back, wreck your health, make your days miserable, make you a victim of the "blues" and gloomy thoughts! There is a marvelous modern remedy called EATONIO that brings, oh! such guide relief from your stomach. oh! such quick relief from your stomach miseries-sets your stomach to rights-makes it strong, cool, sweet and comfortable. Helps you get back your strength, vigor, vitality, enthusiasm and good cheer. So many thousands upon thousands of sufferers have used EATONIC with such marvelously helpful reway if you will just give it a trial. Get a big 50 cent box of EATONIC—the good tasting tablets that you eat like a bit of candy—from your druggist today. He will return your money if results are not even more than your

Then you'd shake your big white head and stroke your long white beard-you'd have such a distinguished had leaned suddenly close to him and long white beard! and you'd say, 'No. left upon his cheek the veriest feather I don't seem to remember any Lucy Morgan; I wonder what made me think I did?' And poor me! I'd be deep in "No. It must keep on being almost. the ground, wondering if you'd heard about it and what you were saying! Good-by for today. Don't work too

George immediately seized pen and paper, plaintively but vigorously requesting Lucy not to imagine him with a beard, distinguished or otherwise. even in the extremities of age. Then, after inscribing his protest in the matter of this visioned beard, he concluded his missive in a tone mollified to tenderness, and proceeded to read a letter from his mother which had reached him simultaneously with Lucy's. Isabel wrote from Asheville, where she had just arrived with her

"I think your father looks better already, darling, though we've been here only a few hours. It may be we've found just the place to build him up. The doctors said they hoped it would prove to be, and if it is, it would be worth the long struggle we had with him to get him to give up and come. I'm afraid that in my anxiety to get him to do what the doctors wanted him to, I wasn't able to back up Brother George as I should in his difficulty with Sydney and Amelia, I'm so sorry George is more upset than I've ever seen him-they've got what they wanted, and they're sailing before long, I hear, to live in Florence. Father said he couldn't stand the constant persuading-I'm afraid the word he used was 'nagging.' I can't understand people behaving like that. George says they may be Ambersons, but they're vulgar! I'm afraid I almost agree with him. At least, I think they were inconsiderate.

"We plan to stay six weeks if the

"Devotedly, your mother,

"ISABEL." But she did not keep her husband there for the six weeks she anticpated. She did not keep him anywhere that long. Three weeks after writing this letter, she telegraphed suddenly to George that they were leaving for home at once; and four days later, when he and a friend came whistling into his study, from lunch at the club, he found another telegram upon his

. . His Uncle George and the Major met him at the station when he arrived—the first time the Major had ever come to meet his grandson. The old gentleman sat in his closed carriage (which still needed paint) at the entrance to the station, but he got out and advanced to grasp George's hand tremulously, when the latter appeared. "Poor fellow!" he said, and patted him repeatedly upon the shoulder. "Poor fellow! Poor Georgie!"

George noticed that the Major's tremulousness did not disappear, as they drove up the street, and that he seemed much feebler than during the summer. Principally, however, George was concerned with his own emotion, or rather, with his lack of emotion; and the anxious sympathy of his grandfather and his uncle made him feel hypocritical. He was not grief-stricken; but he felt that he ought to be, and, with a secret shame, concealed his callousness beneath an affectation

But when he was taken into the room where lay what was left of Wilbur Minafer, George had no longer to pretend; his grief was sufficient. It needed only the sight of that forever inert semblance of the quiet man who had been always so quiet a part of his son's life-so quiet a part that George had seldom been consciously aware that his father was indeed a part of his life. As the figure lay there, its very quietness was what was most lifelike; and suddenly it struck George hard. And in that unexpected, racking grief of his son, Wilbur Minafer became more vividly George's father than he had ever been in life.

When George left the room, his arm was about his black-robed mother, his shoulders were still shaken with sobs. He leaned upon his mother; she gently comforted him; and presently he recovered his composure and became self-conscious enough to wonder if he had not been making an unmanly display of himself. "I'm all right again, mother," he said awkwardly. "Don't worry about me: you'd better go lie down, or something; you look pretty pale."

Isabel did look pretty pale, but not ghastly pale, as Fanny did. Fanny's grief was overwhelming; she stayed in her room, and George did not see her until the next day, a few minutes before the funeral, when her haggard face appalled him.

The annoyance gave way before a recollection of the sweet mournfulness of his mother's face, as she had said good-by to him at the station, and of how lovely she looked in her mourning. He thought of Lucy, whom he had seen only twice, and he could not help feeling that in these quiet interviews he had appeared to her as tinged with heroism-she had shown, rather than said, how brave she thought him. When he went back to college, what came most vividly to George's mind, during retrospections, was the despairing face of his Aunt Fanny, Again and again he thought of it; he could not avoid its haunting. Her grief had been so silent, yet it had so amazed him.

George felt more and more compassion for this ancient antagonist of his, and he wrote to his mother about her:

"I'm afraid poor Aunt Fanny might think now father's gone we won't want her to live with us any longer and because I always teased her so much she might think I'd be for turning her out. I don't know where on earth she'd go or what she could live on if we did do something like this, and of course we never would do such a thing, but I'm pretty sure she had something of the kind on her mind. She didn't say anything, but the way she looked is what makes me think so. Honestly, to me she looked just scared sick. You tell her there isn't any danger in the world of my treating her like that. Tell her everything is to go on just as it always has. Tell her to cheer up!"

Isabel did more for Fanny than telling her to cheer up. Everything that Fanny inherited from her father, old, Aleck Minafer, had been invested in Wilbur's business; and Wilbur's business, after a period of illness corresponding in dates to the illness of Wilbur's body, had died just before Wilbur did. George Amberson and Fanny were both "wiped out to a miracle of precision," as Amberson said. They "owned not a penny and owed not a penny," he continued, explaining his phrase. "It's like the moment just before drowning: you're not under water and you're not out of it. All you know is that you're not dead yet."

He spoke philosophically, having his "prospects" from his father to fall back upon; but Fanny had neither "prospects" nor philosophy. However, a legal survey of Wilbur's estate revealed the fact that his life insurance was left clear of the wreck; and Isabel, with the cheerful consent of her son, promptly turned this salvage over to her sister-in-law. Invested, it would yield something better than nine hundred dollars a year, and thus she was assured of becoming neither a pauper nor a dependent, but proved to be, as Amberson said, adding his efforts to the cheering up of Fanny, "an heiress, after all, in spite of rolling mills and

The collegian did not return to his home for the holidays. Instead, Isabel joined him, and they went South for the two weeks. She was proud of her stalwart, good-looking son at the hotel where they stayed, and it was meat and drink to her when she saw how people stared at him in the lobby and on the big verandas-indeed, her vanity in him was so dominant that she was unaware of their staring at her with more interest and an adfriendlier evoked.

Both of them felt constantly the difference between this Christmas time and other Christmas times of theirsin all, it was a sorrowful holiday. But when Isabel came East for George's commencement, in June, she brought Lucy with her-and things began to seem different, especially when George Amberson arrived with Lucy's father on class day. Eugene had been in New York, on business: Amberson easily persuaded him to this outing; and they made a cheerful party of ft, with the new graduate of course the hero and center of it all.

His uncle was a fellow alumnus. "Yonder was where I roomed when I was here," he said, pointing out one of the university buildings to Eugene. "I don't know whether George would let my admirers place a tablet to mark the spot, or not. He owns all these buildings now, you know."

"Didn't you, when you were here? Like uncle, like nephew."

"I'm sure I didn't have it so badly at his age," Amberson said reflectively, as they strolled on through the commencement crowd.

Eugene laughed. "You need only three things to explain all that's good and bad about Georgie." "Three?"

"He's Isabel's only child. He's an Amberson. He's a boy."

"Well, Mister Bones, of these three things which are the good ones and which are the bad ones?" "All of them," said Eugene.

George took no conspicuous part in either the academic or the social celebrations of his class; he seemed to regard both sets of exercises with a tolerant amusement, his own "crowd" "not going in much for either of those sorts of things," as he explained to Lucy. What his crowd had gone in for remained ambiguous; some negligent testimony indicating that, except for an astonishing reliability which they all seemed to have attained in matters relating to musical comedy, they had not gone in for anything. Certainly the question one of them put to Lucy, in response to investigations of hers, seemed to point that way: "Don't you think," he said, "really, don't you think that being things is rather better than doing things?"

He said "rahthuh bettuh" for "rather better," and seemed to do it deliberately, with perfect knowledge of what he was doing. Later, Lucy mocked him to George, and George refused to smile: he somewhat inclined to such pronunciations, himself. This inclination was one of the things that he had acquired in the four years.

What else he had acquired, it might have puzzled him to state, had anybody asked him and required a direct reply within a reasonable space of time. He had learned how to pass examinations by "cramming;" that is, in three or four days and nights he could get into his head enough of a selected fragment of some scientific of philosophical or literary or linguistic subject to reply plausibly to six questions out of ten. He could retain the information necessary for such a feat just long enough to give a successful performance; then it would evaporate utterly from his brain, and leave him undisturbed. George, like his "crowd," not only preferred "being things" to "doing things," but had contented himself with four years of "being things" as a preparation for going on "being things." And when Lucy rather shyly pressed him for his friend's probable definition of the "things" it seemed so superior and beautiful to be, George raised his eyebrows slightly, meaning that she should have understood without explanation; but he did explain: "Oh, family and all that—being a gentleman, I suppose."

Lucy gave the horizon a long look, but offered no comment.

COURTED BY GREEK KING.

Miss Josephine Marie Kelly of Chicago, who is now in Athens as a member of the American Red Cross, is receiving marked attention from King Alexander of Greece, whom she met ast January at a tea given in the home of Greek friends. King Alexander, according to the story, made no attempt to conceal his admiration for the attractive American girl. Since their first meeting they have, according to report, been seen together at a number of functions attended by both. Will the king marry the American girl? That is the big question perplexing Athens society.

Abyssinian Flings Big Anaconda Around Cage to Wake It for Visitors.

Washington. - Duke Dodjazmatch Nado, a member of the imperial Abyssinian delegation now visiting this country, picked up the huge anaconda in the Washington zoo and calmly shook the sleeping reptile into consciousness. Onlookers gasped.

The delegation was visiting the zoo, where specimens of the wild beasts which were sent to former President Roosevelt from Abyssinia by Emperor Menelik II are quartered. They had paused by the cage of the anaconda. It was asleep. One of the party expressed a desire to see the snake move and the guide prodded it with a stick, but it dozed on. When further proddings failed to disturb it Duke Nado thrust his hand into the cage and, taking the reptile by the throat, shook it until it quivered and squirmed into wakefulness. Then he quietly tossed it to the far end of the cage.

His act gave the party a thrill, but the duke's modest deportment indicated that snake charming is no novelty to him.
